The Philippine Embassy in Greece, led by Ambassador Rigoberto Tiglao, successfully celebrated the 111th anniversary of the proclamation of Philippine independence with two very successful events in Athens.

In the evening of June 12, Ambassador Tiglao and Mrs. Getsy Tiglao hosted a well-attended diplomatic reception at the Ambassador's residence at Paleo Psychico.

Ambassador and Mrs. Tiglao welcomed some 300 guests from the Greek government, the diplomatic corps, representatives from the Greek business sector, and leaders of the Filipino Community in Greece and members of Greek media.

Capt. Panagiotis Tsakos, who is one of Greece's biggest ship owners, Olympic Gulf Tankers owner Adonis Antoniou, and Elvictor Group owner Stavros Galanakis were among the many shipping-industry magnates and executives at the celebration of the national day of the Philippines, whose nationals now make up about thirty per cent of the total officers and seamen in Greek-owned and managed ships. Some fifty resident ambassadors from Asia-Pacific, Europe, Latin America, and Africa enjoyed Filipino food at the reception together with honorary consuls, officials of the Greek Ministry of Foreign Affairs and other government institutions.

Two top-rating television channels in Greece, Star Channel and Antenna (ANT1) covered the event and interviewed Ambassador Tiglao together with Ilias Psinakis, a popular television personality. Ilias' uncle, Steve Psinakis, is a prominent Greek corporate executive in Manila married into the country's richest families and renowned as an anti-dictatorship fighter in the 1980s in the Philippines.

The guests were treated to servings of Filipino dishes such as pancit bihon, chicken adobo, spring rolls, pork barbecue and spicy chicken wings. The world-famous Philippine beer, San Miguel, in its original brew and in modern low-calorie and single-malt brews, became a favorite drink at the party, as well as Coco Magic virgin coconut juice produced and manufactured by Consolidated Dairy.

"Best seller" of the evening was also the Filipino concoction called the halo-halo, with almost everyone lining up to sample a taste of the hugely popular Filipino summer dessert.

A video presentation about the Philippines and all-Filipino music put together by Philippine Embassy played all night.

New Greek Ambassador to the Philippines

The new Greek Ambassador to the Philippines Stefanidou with Ambassador Tiglao.

Greece has appointed veteran diplomat Mrs. Polyxeni Stefanidou as its new ambassador to the Philippines, replacing Ambassador Yorgos Nicolaidis.

Ambassador Stefanidou will be in Manila starting 20 September 2009. She has more than twenty years of experience in the foreign service. From 1995 to 2005, she has served various positions in Greece's resident missions in Germany, Bulgaria. Her last post was as Consul-General in San Francisco, U.S.A.

H.E. Stefanidou graduated with a Bachelor of Arts degree from the School of Archaeology and History at the University of Athens. She also holds Masters degree in Public Administration from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

She is married to retired Vice Admiral Konstantinos Kanavariotis. They have a daughter, who is now in college.

 In a separate celebration held on 21 June, the Philippine Embassy in cooperation with Filipino community organizations in Athens, held day-long festivities for the Filipino community at the Fokianos National Gymnasium in Zappeio. For the second straight year, the stage and venue were covered with a huge marquee and four big tents to shade people from the hot summer sun. Athens News, once again the Philippine Embassy's Communications Sponsor, distributed free newspapers and flyers at the event and beverages and other products provided by Coca Cola, San Miguel Beer and Coco Magic from Consolidated Dairy. Prizes for the raffle and other contests were provided by various companies in Greece. The day-long event kicked-off with the parade of various Filipino community associations in Greece. Prior to the singing of the national anthem, selected students from the Philippine School in

Greece (PSG) and (formerly known as KAPHILCA or Katipunan Philippines Cultural Academy), presented a biorama or a "living diorama" titled "Balik Silip sa Landas Tungo Sa Kalayaan". It consisted of three parts: the cry of Balintawak, execution of Dr. Jose Rizal in Bagumbayan, and the proclamation of Philippine independence in Kawit, Cavite. Officials of the Philippine Embassy led by the ambassador, read the Independence Day messages of President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo and other Philippine officials. The occasion was highlighted by singing, dance and national costume competitions and superb cultural performances from PSG students and representatives of various Filipino organizations. PSG students in colorful costumes wowed the crowd with their impressive performance of Singkil. PAMANA, a group of young Filipino children playing string instruments - mandolinata and guitar -- under the watch of Atty. Humabon Orlanes, a long-time Filipino resident in Greece, delighted the audience with their rendition of Bayan Ko Tanging Ikaw, Hotel California and Faithful Love. The children's parlor games and the modern dance contest also gave the event a very festive mood as the crowd continued to increase even towards the afternoon. Various kinds of Filipino food like siopao, barbecue, caldereta, adobo, goto and halo-halo were available and sold from more than 30 food stalls set up by Filcom co-organizers especially for the event. About 1,200 Filipinos, Greeks and other nationalities and even tourists attended this year's celebration at Zappeio. Last June 24, Ambassador and Mrs. Tiglao and Philippine Honorary Consul Shemaine Bushnell-Kyriakides hosted a diplomatic reception in Nicosia which was attended by no less than the President of Cyprus Dimitris Christofias. Full story and photos on page 7.

OFWs in Thessaloniki welcome POLO team

Labor Attache George Eduvala (extreme right) talks about rights of overseas Filipino workers under Greek labor and immigration laws, while panelists Glad Tidings Fellowship Pastor Ernesto Gutierrez and Filipino Organization in Greece President Rowena Magnaye look on.

Ms. Rowena Magnaye, president of Filipino Community in Northern Greece, and more than a hundred Filipino workers in Thessaloniki welcomed the POLO team, headed by Labor Attache George A. Eduvala, Tito Baldago and Pag-Ibig Representative Jean V. Santos, who came to visit them on May 17.

The Philippine Honorary Consul in Thessaloniki, Nikolaos Margaropoulos also met with the POLO team.

During the visit, the team held a forum on workers' rights under the labor laws of Greece, the new EU directives on immigration, and highlights of the Pag-ibig Overseas Program. Ms. Magnaye presented the common problems encountered by the workers, particularly on wages, residence permits and the practice of employers of unfairly holding the workers' passports.

After the forum, 27 OFWs signed up as new members of Pag-ibig as the rest formed a queue to update their contributions.

34 OFWs got diplomas on caregiving and computing

Thirty-four (34) OFWs graduated from separate courses on Basic Computing and Care Giving last May and received certificates signed by Ambassador Tiglao.

The courses were offered free by the Philippine Overseas Labor Office (POLO), each consisting of 20 training hours.

They were held two hours each every Sunday at the POLO's Filipino Workers Center at Ambelokipi district in central Athens.

The care-giving course orients the trainees on the proper care of the elderly, the young, even household pets, and the rudiments of medical first aid. The computer course walks the trainee through the stages of computer literacy and into the modern
